

MIYAGAWACHO SAMURAI MACHIYA - How to reach the house

The house is located in the Higashiyama District, the East part of the city. It is between Gojo Street and Shijo Street, on the right side of the Kamo River. The Gion area is just north of it, and numerous temples are on the East (right) of it. The easiest way to go from the Kyoto Station to Miyagawacho Samurai Machiya is by taxi. A bus ride is another option. See next page for the detail.

The house is about 2 km (1.25 miles) away from the central exit of the Kyoto station.

The easiest way to go from the Kyoto Station to Miyagawacho Samurai Machiya is by taxi. From the Central Exit, it will take you less than 10 minutes and cost about yen 1,000 for up to four persons. Note that if you arrive in Kyoto by Shinkansen (the bullet train), you will arrive at the South Exit of the Station and the ride will be slightly longer. If you are checking in at our office (Dozen Ryokan), you can easily walk there from the central exit and ask our staff to call you a taxi.

Alternatively, you can take the bus #205 (#4, #5, #17) from Kyoto Station to the Kawaramachi-Gojo bus stop. The cost is yen 230 per person. The house is about 500 m away from the bus stop. Although there is a train station a couple of minutes from the house, it is the Keihan Line and there is no direct train from Kyoto Station (JR line) to the Kiyomizu-Gojo train station.
